

HADBAL

H. Davidson

2.

ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

A new and distinct rose cultivar of the Florabunda class characterized by: having stems without prickles; white stripes lightly scattered on pink flowers; clusters of three to six flowers; very rapid rebloom cycle; upright bushy plants of medium height; being well covered with matte foliage; with excellent resistance to mildew, rust and blackspot.

The generic name of this plant is designated as 'HADBAL'. It is being marketed under the commercial name of 'SMOOTH BALLERINA'.

1 Drawing Figure of 'HADBAL' (attached).